CONTAIN

The verb “to contain” therefore belongs more than any other to the concept of dwelling, and it is directly linked to the design of furnishings and the production of everyday objects, giving meaning to their presence in our lives. A sort of pollination that the human body carries out in its close space, where furniture, objects, and clothes act as a connecting tool between the individual and the world.

FREESPACE

Zalf presents the modular shoulder system Freespace in the new finishes TSS, Opus, thanks to the design by R&S Zalf and Roberto Gobbo. In this way, Zalf maintains and further develops the concept of furnishing systems that become architectural structures, emphasizing the design of multifunctional containment elements.
